

Sundown Syndrome (Caring for Aging Parents Book 1)

In 2006, Edie Dykeman moved in with her then eighty-three-year-old father. He was legally blind and color blind since birth, and was having increasing difficulty with the side-effects of diabetes. Since that time he was diagnosed with Alzheimers-like symptoms. Her mother had TIA dementia and passed away in 2004. Sundown Syndrome is a symptom of dementia that often reveals itself in the late afternoon or evening. In this book, Edie shares from experience what to expect from Sundown Syndrome and how caregivers and family members can help their loved one while coping with the challenges they face.
