

The Monticello Dialogues: William McDonough in Conversation with Michael Toms

From the lineage of Thomas Jefferson and Buckminster Fuller emerges another brilliant prophet of the possible. Architect William McDonough is carrying the banner of anticipatory design science to this generation and he is waving it in the boardrooms of some of the largest global corporations. The buildings, product innovations and ideas emerging from his team are at the forefront of what he calls the next industrial revolution. It is a revolution so profound that it views humans as tools of nature. The central question that drives McDonough's work is: How can we best serve all the children of all species, for all time?
