

Father Knows Less, or: Can I Cook My Sister?: One Dads Quest to Answer His Sons Most Baffling Questions

A New York Times editor sets out to answer the peculiarly marvelous questions of his precocious young son and winds up on an unexpected journey of his own. Wendell Jamieson's son, Dean, has always had a penchant for odd questions. Dad, he asked, apropos of nothing, what would hurt more getting run over by a car, or getting stung by a jellyfish? Dad, why do policemen like donuts? What's it feel like to get stabbed? Does Mona Lisa wear shoes? Can I cook my sister? Because Dad was a newspaperman, he decided to seek out answers and got swept up in the hunt. He spoke to movie directors and ship captains and brain surgeons and stabbing victims and lottery winners and museum curators and politicians and judges and compulsive shoppers and mothers-in-law and magicians—seven Yoko Ono and a dominatrix. But what began as a lark quickly grew into something larger. Blending a charming father-son journey with the surprising, sometimes hilarious questions and answers it spawned, Father Knows Less offers a heartwarming exploration of that childlike curiosity that lives within us all.

My curiosity got the best of me the other day and I gave in by watching one of those "End of the World" conspiracies videos. This time around the date is set for July 29, 2016. So in three days the biblical prophecies will come true and we will be swallowed up by hell fire while the others who are "saved" will rejoice in the heavens.
