

User Driven Change: Give Them What They Want

What is User Driven Change? Our stance is that the changes you make should be predicated upon data and input gathered from your customer. If you do not keep your customer in mind when changing your website, the results can be resoundingly negative. At the very least, you could lose any potential new customers and their resulting sales. At the very worst, you could see a highly negative viral campaign spring up via blogs and other forms of messaging that you have no way of controlling. How can a business in a saturated industry differentiate their offering? How can you tell what's wrong? How can you tell if the changes you make worked? These are the questions that we will help you answer. You will see these concepts laid out by answering 4 other questions: 1. How can you make a site that is quick to use and engage? 2. How do you create a site that is simple to use? 3. How do you create a site that is very inviting? 4. How do you create a site that is hard to leave?

My curiosity got the best of me the other day and I gave in by watching one of those "End of the World" conspiracies videos. This time around the date is set for July 29, 2016. So in three days the biblical prophecies will come true and we will be swallowed up by hell fire while the others who are "saved" will rejoice in the heavens.
