Lignans, by convention, are a group of natural products that are formed by linking two phenylpropanoid units (C₆C₃ units) by oxidative coupling. Most importantly, in 6,3 a lignan, two (C₆C₃ units) are bound through the central carbon of their side chains, 6,3,0 i. e. the 8 and 8 positions (1, 2). The occurrence of C₆C₃-dimers, linked at sites other 6,3,0 than the 8,8 positions, is also known and these compounds have been termed neolignans (3, 4). As these two groups of compounds have close structural as well as biosynthetic relationships, they are often associated together and incorporated under the general term lignan (5). The diverse structural categorization of true lignans and of a few neolignans is presented in Fig. 1. Through the years, several review articles or books covering different facets of lignans, including their chemistry (6, 7), biogenesis (8), synthesis (9), and biological activities (10) have been published. Enduring research for the investigation of secondary metabolites of plants has evidenced some compounds that are biogenetically related to true lignans or neolignans but bear some features not discerned in conventional lignans. These compounds or groups of compounds have been termed as non-conventional lignans, and include coumarinolignans, flavonolignans, and stilbenolignans. The non-conventional lignans, like the conventional ones, have two C₆C₃ units linked 6,3 together but have additional structural features to place them also under the category of coumarins, flavonoids, or stilbenes.

My curiosity got the best of me the other day and I gave in by watching one of those "End of the World" conspiracies videos. This time around the date is set for July 29, 2016. So in three days the biblical prophecies will come true and we will be swallowed up by hell fire while the others who are "saved" will rejoice in the heavens.
