

An American Odyssey: To Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana and Beyond

As man moves from one generation to the next, we realize that we are the culmination of people and events that came before us. The boy Josias Stone was a mere lad when he left his home in England around 1730 to come to America. Through a dozen generations and 300 years, we remember what he did, and his name appears again in a new millennium in Kenneth Stone Kemker and son, Josias. By hearing these names and stories, we celebrate our collective accomplishments. But we have more. We have Ratliffs and Wycoffs and Lees and Botts and Starks and Wiltzes and Eisens and Lands and Daniels. We have the story of Seth Botts, Sheriff of Bath County around 1910, killing a rabid dog with a single shot after his black servant got word to him that the dog was threatening the town. We learn that he was a marksman from a young age, similar to his descendent, John Franklin Wiltz in our time. We had poets and artists in Margaret Wycoff Stark and Lola Daniels Wiltz, who left their artistic, musical and acting talents to Stark Wilz, Slater Kemker, Kevin Wiltz and Jennie Patterson, among many others. The intellectual capital in our Wycoff and Wiltz roots is manifested in countless descendents. But most importantly, we have the love of parents to children, like Uncle Louis Paul Stark, Jr. with daughters Lisa and Laina and Sandy and step-daughters Lisa and Dina and Julie, and vice versa, that has not only sustained us but this Country and its great experiment, of which we are all a part. This has been a powerful and cathartic experience for me - a lesson in the pain and success of an American family. We have been through births, changes, fear, death, abject misery, failure, weakness, hope, redemption, love. There is more pain between the lines than one is entitled to write, to protect the ones who are still here and to protect us from our own sense of despair and failure. There is also more grace in the lives than one can measure. Through weakness we found strength; through boredom we found cr

My curiosity got the best of me the other day and I gave in by watching one of those "End of the World" conspiracies videos. This time around the date is set for July 29, 2016. So in three days the biblical prophecies will come true and we will be swallowed up by hell fire while the others who are "saved" will rejoice in the heavens.
